The RECI LINEAR 18

The Model Eighteen is an all transistor receiver. Its circuitry includes 73 transistors and 76 diodes, a total of 149 solid-state devices. A tuner, pre-amplifier, and power amplifier make up the three basic components mounted on a single chassis and sharing a common power supply. Internal connections between these components have been designed to provide optimum performance from each component while retaining the full flexibility of separate units. The extraordinary flexibility of the Eighteen allows the connection of two pairs of loudspeakers, headphones, a turntable and record changer, an additional tuner (such as AM/FM), a TV sound source, and two tape recorders for record, playback and tape copying functions. Its flexibility will allow other connections to be made for special applications. Its performance is the equal of the finest separate component system of comparable power.

This Receiver has a 3 YEAR WARANTEE

You can even hear the violinist breathing.

Put a Rectilinear speaker to every listening test. Jungle drums. Cymbals. Bells. Anything. We're not test shy. Guitar music? You'll hear the finger snap across the string. Most speakers aren't sensitive enough to pick-up split second sounds like that.
 1812 cannons? We'll give you real boom. Without "boom". Rectilinear tells it like it is.
 So does HI-FI Stereo Review*
 They said, "In our opinion, we have never heard better sound reproduction from any speaker of any size or price."
 When you get straight talk like that from the professionals, you really ought to listen.
